Road-cut visit notes, near Kicukiro.
The cut had already been reported, so I recorded the far side for the first time.

What I saw:
- The layers on the far side are freshly exposed and follow the road line.
- The top bed is the hardest and sticks out a little beyond the lower ones.

What I photographed:
- The whole far face from across the road.
- A close look at the place where the two beds meet.

This note is my own field record for this visit. It does not replace or merge with the earlier report of the same cut.
